

How can citizen science methods and approaches be applied to the field in discussion?

How can decentralized civic data flows help innovate the public sector in particular in relation to public/environmental health services?

What are the pitfalls of this idea of jointly sharing data as beneficial for contributing to collective intelligence?

